Dear Principal/Administrator/Parent:

With the school year on the horizon, the United States Attorney's Office would like your help in protecting Washington students from a variety of hazards they face online.

Unfortunately, it is not just middle-school or high-school-aged children who are at risk, but children in elementary school as well. According to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children's publication Online Victimization of Youth: Five Years Later, 13% of elementary-aged children have received some type of sexual solicitation or approach through the Internet. In Washington, 13% amounts to almost 60,000 of the 460,000 elementary-aged children.

Because we cannot speak to every child, we are hoping you will copy and send the enclosed Safety Tips as well as this letter home with your elementary and middle school students. We are sending this now so it can be included in your first day package. As you can see, one of the Safety Tips sheet contains tips for parents to keep their child safe on the Internet. The other contains Safety Tips for students. You can also find an electronic copy of these enclosures on our website at <http://www.justice.gov/usao/waw/Programs/psc.html>.

We hope parents and caregivers in your district will talk about Internet safety with their child or children so that every Washington child will be better protected from online predators. We appreciate your assistance in this endeavor. Please do not hesitate to call me or Jerrod Patterson, our Project Safe Childhood Coordinator and lead Internet predator prosecutor, at 206-553-7970 if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

JENNY A. DURKAN
United States Attorney
